CONTENTS

PREFACE . . . . . p. v

CHAPTER XXXVIII

FIRST TASKS AS PRIME MINISTER

1. FORMATION OF A NATIONAL THREE-PARTY GOVERNMENT . . . . . p. 1039

Choice limited by Party considerations — Attitude of the three Parties — Unpromising outlook — Securing the Conservative leaders — A few outstanding figures — Doubtful value of some recruits — Bonar Law's loyalty to Party colleagues — Leo Maxse's view — Importance of Labour support — Negotiations with the Labour Party — My address to the Labour Party Executive — The War going badly — Delay is fatal — The King's Government must be carried on — Labour co-operation vital — Proposed new Labour Ministry — Pensions Department — State control of Mines — Shipping control — Food control and land development — A system of rationing — Replies to Labour questions — Relations of Cabinet and Ministry — Labour decides to join the Government — Negotiations with Conservatives — Reasons for adopting small War Cabinet — Members of the Cabinet — Mr. Bonar Law to lead the House.

2. PERSONNEL . . . . . p. 1066

Liberal leaders hold aloof — Problem of Mr. Winston Churchill — Mr. Bonar Law's views — Typical protests — Reasons for Tory antipathy — His admitted ability — A defect in the machine — My appreciation of his value — Objections to other Liberal leaders — Characteristics of Mr. Runciman — Lord Kitchener's view of him — Invitation to Sir Herbert Samuel — Party representation in the new Ministry — Appointment of business men — Office for Mr. Baldwin — Mr. Neville Chamberlain — Labour Party Ministers — Mr. H. A. L. Fisher — A Cabinet Secretariat instituted — Sir Maurice Hankey's appointment — Swift formation of new Ministry.

3. SURVEY OF THE POSITION . . . . p.

The harvest of wrong policies — Strategical opportunities lost — A struggle of endurance — Advantages held by the enemy — Expert antipathy to Turkish campaigns — Deadlock on Salonika and Italian Fronts — Economy in use of man-power essential — Importance of the Home Front — Vital part played by food supplies — In Russia — In Austria — The "Turnip Winter" — Menace of the submarine — Sea power the key to victory — Burdens on our shipping — Growing shortage of vessels — Failure to economise tonnage — The food problem — Inaction of the late Government.